SINGULAR DEATH .- Mary E. Butler, a has just died from a malignant pustule. This is a very rare and singular disease, and always fatal in its results. There are a number of theories as to the cause of the disease, but none appear to be correct, as it generally buffles the skill of the physician. It makes its appearance in the shape of a small pimple somewhere about the mouth, and spreads until death follows, which is not longer than twenty-four hours after. In the case of Miss Butler, the pustule appeared upon the lower lip, in the shape of a small white pimple, surrounded by dark red spots. Physicians were called in, and all remedies which were thought of applied, but to no purpose, as the pus-tule spread over the face, breast and arms of the patient, turning the flesh black, and causing death in twenty-four hours. who resided in Brooklyn, died with the same disease about a year ago. Mr. Hat-field, Mayor's clerk, also died from the same disease about six months since.

the following way:
A number of fist, square metal boxes, filled with fresh water, are placed within an air-tight chamber, around which a constant circulation of sea-water goes on, which, by the evaporation of ether, has been reduced in temperature below the freezing point. This circulation chills all the boxes, and freezes fresh water into hard solid squares, fit for any use to which ice is commonly applied. A small steam engine connected with the apparatus maintains a vacuum in the chamber, and con-denses the other, which is thus made to do and patriotic address strongly denouncing

A NUT FOR GROLOGIETS —In Macoupin county, Ill, recently, the bones of a man were found on a coal bad, capped with two feet of slate rock, ninety feet below the surface of the sarth before the run cut any part away. The bones when found, were covered with a crust or counting of hard, glossy matter, as black as coal itself, but when scraped away left the bones white and majoral.
